"DOORWAYS & ROADWAYS"

"Doorways & Roadways" is installed near the intersection of Broad Street and Center Street. The name is straightforward: the piece features a road leading up through a wooden door frame, which represents the travels and destinations of life. Artist Bill Wood has had work featured in numerous exhibitions over the past several decades.

"EN GARDE!"

"En Garde!" by Judith Greavu is a mixed media sculpture made of bronze. Greavu previously taught at Ohio Northern University, but is retired now. She grew up on the coast of Florida and has had a lifelong fascination with marine animals and plantlife. "En Garde!" is like most of her work in that it is abstract, but suggests a creature from the ocean.

"OLD SCHOOL"

Wayne Vaughn's "Old School" can be found outside the Kingsport Public Library. Over 10 feet tall, the sculpture incorporates repurposed steel I-beams. The sculpture suggests a compass and protractor – old school tools. Vaughn has no formal art education, but has created more than 90 sculptures, most of them massive and metal. The sculpture suggests a compass and protractor – old school tools.

"SHAPESHIFTER"

Mike Roig's sculpture "Shapeshifter," like many of his other works, features a stainless steel top portion that rotates in the wind. Roig lives and works in Carboro, North Carolina, and earned his BA from the University of Maryland. Kingsport's permanent public art collection features Roig's "Yo-Yo's Muse" and "The Answer My Friend".

"BALANCE POINT"

"Balance Point," a stainless steel and bronze sculpture, is the newest piece from Hanna Jubran to be featured in Downtown Kingsport. 10 years ago, Jubran installed his first piece in the Sculpture Walk, "The Four Elements", which is part of Kingsport's permanent collection. Jubran received his MFA in sculpture from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee and currently teaches sculpture at East Carolina University. His sculptures explore the ideas of time, space, balance and movement.

"DIVERSION"

"Diversion" by Brevard, North Carolina, artist Kyle Lusk is a large metal piece made of corten steel noted for its weathered appearance. A native of Western North Carolina, Lusk's work reflects his life-long interest in the balance of beauty and strength in nature. Lusk earned his MFA from East Carolina University and works as an associate professor of art at Brevard College.

"FEMININE ENTWINEMENT"

"Feminine Entwinement" by local artist Val Lyle is one of her "big rope" sculptures. Lyle works in several styles of sculpture and paints as well. She is the artist for Bristol's "Take the Stage" Sculpture celebrating the Birthplace of Country Music and is currently working on "The Spirit of Generosity" in honor of the 75th Santa Train and Kingsport's Centennial. She has taught art at many area colleges including ETSU and Emory & Henry College.

"GOTHIC ARCHWAY"

Jim Gallucci's "Gothic Archway" is located at the Sullivan and Main Street gateway to Downtown Kingsport. This 12-foot-tall stainless steel sculpture is a favorite photo op and has seen its share of engagements. Gallucci has been a sculptor for over 35 years and currently works full time sculpting in Greensboro, North Carolina.

ABOUT KINGSPORT'S Sculpture Walk

Hank T. Foreman, Juror

Hank T. Foreman is an artist, art administrator and educator. He is currently employed by Appalachian State University in Boone, NC where he serves as Chief of Staff for Appalachian State University. Foreman received his B.F.A. in Painting and Sculpture from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and his M.A. in Art Education from Appalachian State University.

Kingsport Office of Cultural Arts and Kingsport Public Art Committee are pleased to present the 10th annual Sculpture Walk in Downtown Kingsport.

"A lot has changed in Downtown Kingsport since that first Sculpture Walk," said Roy Harmon, chairman of the Public Art Committee. "We have new buildings, new restaurants, shops and vibrant parklets throughout downtown."

Kingsport welcomes eight new pieces to this year's Sculpture Walk, curated by Hank Foreman of Appalachian State University. Sculpture Walk X is located in Downtown Kingsport, and most pieces can be seen on New Street. A convenient place to begin the walk is near the Kingsport Library at 400 Broad Street.
